BRIEF HISTORICAL NOTES

Milano rediscovers an historical building with its original beauty, completely refurbished and wisely restored.

Palazzo Francesco Turati, in Via Meravigli 7, was built between 1873 and 1876 on the behalf of Count Francesco Turati, one of the main representative of the Lombard cotton industry. Commissioned by the Count, the engineer and architect Enrico Combi built and designed this wonderful Neo-Renaissance Palace, right in the heart of the city, just a few steps from Milan Cathedral.

The Chamber of Commerce of Milan leases Palazzo Francesco Turati's indoor and outdoor spaces to both public and private bodies, who seek to realise exhibitions, showrooms of collections and products, photographic services, film or advertising sets. An appealing and suggestive location, Palazzo Francesco Turati is perfect for hosting business meetings, launch of new products, fashion shows, theatrical and musical performances and workshops.

Inside the "Sala del Prometeo", the historical library of the Famiglia Meneghina association, the monumental fireplace prevails with its marble decoration and the bronze statue of Prometheus, entirely designed by Pogliaghi back in 1890 according to a Neo-Renaissance taste.

SALOTTO AZZURRO

The image shows a highly ornate interior room, the Salotto Azzurro. The walls are covered in light blue velvet with intricate gold and silk decorations, including a large central mirror and various wall-mounted figures and motifs. The room features a patterned carpet and a doorway leading to another room. The overall aesthetic is classical and luxurious.

Refined and precious, the Salotto Azzurro contrived and decorated, as you may be able to see above the golden wall mirror where the word “Perfectum MDCCCLXXXV” stands out, in 1885 by Pogliaghi. The walls are papered with light-blue velvet with silk and satin decoration and delicate boiserie frame doorways and windows.
